BAD BUTTONS CAN BE AVOIDED

VEGETABLE IVORY BUTTONS. In the past, the dyes on these buttons faded and while manufacturers now produce a button colored with fast dyes, there are still a few "vegetable ivory" buttons left on the market which fade. Be sure to give the buttons close attention when you buy a garment, especially on "sale" or on "clearance" items.

PLASTIC BUTTONS. Major problem here is one of susceptibility to heat. If it's a thermo-plastic button it may los€ its shape when heat is applied, and may even dissolve in clean-

GLASS BUTTONS. Pretty, but a nuisance. They break in handling and often cut the fabric they're fastened to. If you treasure your glass buttons, why not ask us to take them off or snip them off before bringing the garment in?

COVERED BUTTONS. Some cloth-covered buttons are stuffed with a fibrous material which releases a brown dye in cleaning. This dye, like the vegetable-ivory one, may be difficult to remove.

When buying buttons-whether you're buying a garment or loose buttons-check on these points: first if the button itself is dvefast, and second, whether it is imprevious to heat and cleaning. If your merchant can't assure you, you may be better off to choose another set of buttons. That way, you'll be spared a lot of annoyance. And for good cleaning-buttons and all.

Good Evening ....

THE BIG THREE-Without fear or favor it can be said that more people get more information and entertainment from newspapers, radio and television than from any other source.

"You know, when I was a kid I never would have dreamed that such a thing was possible," said one man the next day in describing his reaction to television. "We had movies and we had radio -but none of us would have believed they could be combined and projected into our living room."

So TV for many people is the new thing the big thrill, the last word. They like it. But they also depend upon radio and upon that old reliable standby, the news-

YOUNG AND OLD-Television is, in this area at least, relatively new and therefore most intruiging.

Its audience reacts to TV as did the radio fans of an earlier day, who sat with ears warm and moist inside the clamp of headsets-striving to hear the distant program emanating from KDKA, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Folks kept a radio log in those days, sitting up half the night, jotting down the call letters of stations near and far. "We had Forth Worth last night," they would announce proudly to other radio bugs the next day.

Now folks listen more to their local radio stations than they do to those in more distant cities. Primary reason is, of course, that networks bring nation-wide entertainment and feature programs to the hometown station.

In the growing-up process radio has also devoted a portion of its time to local programs, for radio has found that to win listeners and hold them it must cover the local as well and the national and world

OLDEST OF THEM ALL-The newspaper is the oldest and least glamorous of the three—least glamorous in the sense that its pictures do not move and its words are presented in print.

Lacking the novelty of moving pictures and the emotional inflections of the human voice, the newspaper has been and coninues to be an integral part of our culture because it also has grown up with the naion-from the news leaflets of Colonial times to the scores of pages in today's metropolitan dailies.

Although pictures and features have been added, it is the news, completely and accurately presented, that makes a newspaper unique in its field.

ence on news writers and newspaper columnists. What they write is there to confront them weeks, months and even years later, while the voice on radio or TV leaves an impression without quotable substance. Perhaps for this reason people are more likely to accept as fact that which they read in the newspaper. And if you dispute them, they will present a clipping as proof of their opinion.

. . . BUILT ON WORDS-With variations, TV and radio and newspaper have this in common—somewhere in the background a staff of writers prepared the material presented to be hear Chatter of the TV master of ceremonies or the profoundities of the radio commenator require the services of a writer or writers. Without the benefit of script writers there would be little heard except music. Competent writers can find a place on the staff of a radio station, a TV station or on a newspaper. Today's schools of journalism and speech prepare their graduates for work in all three. This similarity is, however, seldom noted by the newspaper reader or the radio listener, who thinks of them as widely separated fields. In TV most of the news commentary is prepared by journalists and sometimes read by them. The alliance of newspaper, radio and TV is often reflected in ownership of the three facilities, with newspapers owning and operating radio and TV outlets as af-
